(Continued from Page 1) mittee its position would be "exceedingly weak" if it voted to endorse a site which proves to be unfeasible. He said endorsement of a single site might be interpreted as exclusion of other possible locations.

He later told the Press-Herald that the vote for the alternate Torrance location puts the committee in the position of a pressure group. Harvey also said the committee was not representative of the college service area and added, "This resolution is about what we expected from this group."

During debate on the resolution, Nicholas Drale, a former Torrance councilman, told the committee the Torrance site is "an ideal location." Drale said the college "might as well be on Catalina Island as in San Pedro."

AS ADOPTED, the resolution urges trustees to select the Torrance site but promises full support and cooperation for the San Pedro location if the Torrance site proves unfeasible.

Dr. Harry Nethery, dean of facilities planning for the college, said depth studies of all three proposed locations are now under way. Those studies, he added, will be completed in time for the Oct. 13 and 14 meeting of the trustees in Long Beach.

Harvey told the committee Assemblyman Thomas, who strongly backed the original Torrance location during early discussions of a permanent campus, had pledged his cooperation and support for any site selected by the trustees.

Thomas will introduce legislation to provide support for the college next year and to provide any necessary funds for land acquisition once a site has been selected, Harvey said.

Dr. Nethery said enrollment is still open in two evening classes being offered by the college. Masterpieces of American Literature meets each Monday and Wednesday from 7 to 9:30 p.m., while an American Music class will meet on Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

Seventh-day Adventists Sponsor Junior Academy

Opening of the South Bay Junior Academy under the direction of area Seventh-day Adventist churches has been announced by Chey E. Frederick, chairman of the governing school board.

The school, located on nine acres at 4400 W. Del Amo Blvd., has begun classes for the second year. Classes are being offered from grades 1 through 10. A staff of professional instructors under the direction of Principal Ozzie Emanuel guides the educational program at the school, Chairman Frederick reported.

Objectives of the school, as outlined by the chairman, are designed to meet the need for "developing sterling Christian characters which will stand firm in time of crisis."

Formal objectives of the church-related school include:

- To give an intellectual and practical training which will make each student resourceful, confident, and well qualified to meet the realities of life.
- To promote the development of leadership, personality and habits of refinement and culture in every young person.
- To prepare young people to fill a place in the great work God has for them to perform.

The South Bay Junior Academy is operated for the youth of the Seventh-day Adventist faith, but welcomes any boy or girl of school age, regardless of religion affiliation, who desires a character-building education, Frederick said. He said the school currently could accommodate 40 more students. Classes are held for elementary level students in grades one to six, and the junior academy level from grades seven to ten. Age requirements are similar to those in public schools, it was reported.

The school's chairman may be telephoned at TE 5-8391, or the school may be reached by telephoning FR 1-4003.
